The Justice outlined the evidence

as this, he explained, was usually from such sordid sources—from persons of admitted bad character.

During his summation, which consumed three hours, Mr. Steuer scored the prosecutor for the questions he had asked Rickard, when on the stand Monday, about his remembrance of ever having been caught cheating at cards, which he declared to be untrue.

He compared the records, as presented in testimony, of Rickard and the girl witnesses. Both girls had admitted the condinance came with the Alder-
